I'm Eri. My house is near the mountains. During winter my mother opens a restaurant at a *ski resort. One fine day in the morning, when I was helping my mother, a young man ran into the restaurant. He smiled at me and said, "Do you sell milk here?" "I'm sorry we don't," I answered. He looked sad. So I asked, "Will you drink it? Or will it be for your baby?" He said, "No. A baby cat will. *On my way back from Tokyo, I found it in a box by the street. I *took it up and put it in my car. Now it is crying for milk."

I had a good idea. I went to the kitchen and brought *a bottle of milk. It was my father's. He drinks it every day. I said to the man, "Here you are. Take this milk, please." He looked very happy and gave me money for it. But I gave it back. I gave him a small dish, too. "Thank you," he said many times. He looked back again and again, and went away. In the evening, my father was looking for the bottle. He said, "Did I drink milk today?" "You saved a little baby today, Father," I said, and began to tell him what happened this morning.
